Echoes From Former Citizens of Coleman

(By Henry Bansmer)

Bob Laird at 85, the ex-Mountie, now living with his wife in the Senior Citizens' Lodge at Red Deer wishes to be remembered through the Press to any and all of his old friends living, back to the Frank Slide, 1903.

Harry Higgins, and wife, now great-grandparents, are living in Spokane, Wash. U.S.A.

Shorty Manson, the star hockey goalie, and expert in most any sport, says "hello" from Pasco, Wash.

Harry Holmes, also a former hockey and football goalie, seems to be the only one left alive that we know of lives on Vancouver Island. The coal mines there are "dud dud dud".

McKeen Hunter, two years ago was living in Springfield, Nova Scotia (Ed. note: McKeen Hunter passed away last year.)

Last but not least, the greatest of them all, the very lovable Rev. T. Murray, one of the early pastors of the United Church in Coleman, now lives in Owen Sound, Ont. He is 90 years young and very crippled with rheumatism. Your cards would be much appreciated.

Charlie Graham and Charlotte, the wandering "Jews", were leaving Seattle, Wash., U.S.A., to settle in White Rock, B. C., a small town on the area near the boundary line.

The second best native hockey player of the Crows Nest Pass, the late Alex Grisak, has a lovely grand-daughter, who skated three years with the "Ice Follies".

"Breathes there a man with soul so dead"

Who never to himself hath said: "This is my own, my native town, Coleman, Alberta?"

OF MANY THINGS

By Ambrose Hills

ON BEING A CANADIAN

I have listened to many wordsmiths on the subject of being a Canadian. Last month I attended the Symposium at Winnipeg, held under the auspices of the Canadian Centenary Council, which discussed "Awareness of Canada". While I disagreed with a number of things that were said, I believe the meeting was a useful one, because it made us all do some hard thinking about our country.

The difficulty with Symposia is that they attract men and women who love words, and when the talk begins to roll there is a tendency to forget the real things, and even to miss out on the spirit that pervades this land. Intellectuals, strangely enough, appear to concentrate entirely on problems and are sublimely unaware, when the speeches end, that they've ground their mental gears on fluff and failed to mention the big, important things at all.

How can one be truly aware of Canada without recognizing the job our industries did in war time, and are doing today, in one of the toughest competitive markets in history? Yet at the Symposium, industry was rarely mentioned. Canadian awareness is mighty skimpy if it does not include an understanding of the fabulous job Canadian farmers have been doing, yet agriculture was hardly mentioned. Railroads — you wouldn't have known existed, in spite of the fact that they are in the throes of a mighty struggle under management more bold and imaginative than ever before. These job-makers on whom so much of our culture depends must have been somewhere off in the wings, like Broadway angels, but the wordsmiths were oblivious to them.

I would like to see another Symposium, conducted with the same skill, but featuring on the panels some of the men and women of Canada who are the doers, and on whom our destiny depends. A Western rancher, a Nova Scotia apple farmer, a railroad president, a banker, an industrialist and a store-keeper. They may not be quite as articulate as the men who spoke at Winnipeg, but there would be excitement inherent in the things they would talk about.

The Canadian Centenary Council conducted its Symposium with commendable skill. But its panelists were disappointing.

Let's have another one, equally well organized, but with a set of panelists drawn from those who really make the news and set the pace in Canada.

OF MANY THINGS

By Ambrose Hills

HEY MABEL!

I am told that in Manitoba beverage rooms, the male waiters are outraged. Most Manitobans are able to watch TV advertising from across the border, and one of those advertisements features the customers saying, "Hey Mabel, Black Label!" So effective has this gimmick been, or at least so adaptable to humor, that Manitobans get a kick out of using it in our own beer parlors or beverage rooms.

Manitoba has not yet revised its laws relating to the advertising of beer and wine, and consequently the local breweries send their money across to the U.S.A. or to Ontario radio stations which penetrate the province. One well-known TV personality commutes to the U.S.A. in order to deliver advertising messages to Manitobans he may not speak to in that fashion from local outlets.

How long this situation can continue is anybody's guess. Very likely the Roblin government would like to put an end to such nonsense by adopting a code similar to that of Ontario. But rural MLA's, subject to pressure from small but vocal groups, are not always courageous enough to go along with modernization of laws.

The whole story of beer and liquor advertising is a sad and sorry one. So artificial has the situation become that many youngsters believe that the only industry truly interested in traffic safety, or the better things of life, is the brewing industry. They may be interested all right, but not THAT interested.

Manitoba has an economic interest in reforming these laws. Once the centre of an important publishing industry, Manitoba lost out when other provinces allowed such advertising and we did not. Magazines loaded with such advertising come pouring in here just the same and there's no way to stop them.

Now the TV industry here is in a similar position. American broadcasters are getting the money, but about 80 per cent of Manitobans are hearing and seeing the advertising. It is enough to make anybody squirm to hear Manitobans being urged — from a North Dakota station, to "live it up in Manitoba!"

No wonder beverage room waiters are chagrined!

Report FromParliament Hill

(Lawrence E. Kindt, M.P.)

A subject of interest on Parliament Hill, particularly among the Members, is the proposed redistribution of seats in the Federal Parliament based on the 1961 population census.

As everyone knows, the Federal census is taken every 10 years, for instance, 1951, 1961 and the next one will be taken in 1971. It requires about one year to tabulate the figures and publish the results. Then the Federal government gets down to considering constituency boundaries. As yet, the actual legislation on redistribution has not appeared before Parliament, and so far the debates on the subject have been in general terms on the principles to be considered in redrawing the boundaries of the various Federal Electoral constituencies in Canada.

It is quite obvious that it is unfair that 265,000 persons in the constituency of Scarborough, Ont., which is a part of Toronto, should be represented by only one M.P., and it is equally unfair that one M.P. should represent only 12,000 persons in the Magdalen Island, Quebec, as is now the case. From time to time various persons have asked "Why not have representation by population?" In theory it sounds both logical and simple, but unfortunately this is not the case (no political problem is ever simple).

For instance, in the articles of Confederation, the province of Prince Edward Island is guaranteed for M.P.'s regardless of her population which at the present time is only a little over 100,000. Likewise New Brunswick and Newfoundland have similar guarantees.

In addition, rural constituencies (like Macleod with 51,000 people) have in most cases always had a slightly smaller population than city constituencies. Most rural constituencies have from 20 per cent to 40 per cent less people than city ridings. One of the reasons for this is that an M.P. in a rural riding has difficulty (due to geography, etc.) in properly representing a constituency that spreads over a large area of about 140 miles north and south and the same east and west. Contrast this with a city riding where the population is tightly packed into a small urban area.

The Canadian average under the present system is determined by dividing the population of Canada

with green pepper gravy

You don't have to live in the icy Arctic regions to appreciate a deliciously hearty main dish for this time of year.

With the first chill breezes, family appetites sharpen. And here is a recipe to satisfy those hunger pangs . . . Fried Chicken with Green Pepper Cream Gravy.

Convenient evaporated milk will make the chicken extra flavorful and succulent, with a crispy even crust, then adds nutrients and creamy smoothness to the colorful gravy.

Fried Chicken with Green Pepper Cream Gravy
(Makes Four Servings)

3 pound broiler-fryer chicken, cut in pieces; 1½ cups undiluted evaporated milk; ¾ cup flour; ½ teaspoon salt; ½ teaspoon pepper; ¼ teaspoon cinnamon; ¼ teaspoon ginger; ½ cup shortening.

Place chicken pieces in large

(1961 census), 18,238,247 by 265, the present number of representatives in the House of Commons, which equals approximately 68,000 people for the national average per constituency. Also the industries and resources contained in some rather sparsely settled areas of the country, which contribute to the economy and well-being of the country in general, must also be given some consideration. There are many other factors to be considered, such as traditional boundaries, municipal election, etc.

While the exact terms of the proposed legislation have not as yet appeared before Parliament, a number of the terms have leaked out (as often happens) and the following are of interest:

1—That the boundaries of every constituency in Canada (except one in Quebec) will be changed.
2—That the population of an "average" constituency will be about 68,000 with about 20 per cent leeway in either direction (larger for urban areas, smaller for rural constituencies like Macleod)
3—That each province will have a committee to redraw the boundaries of the constituencies, rather than one committee for the whole of Canada.

At the moment it does not seem likely that the terms of this legislation will appear before Parliament until the next session as this subject is likely to be a very contentious one, since nearly every M.P. will be affected one way or another.

It has also been rumored (and not denied) that 17 rural and semi-rural seats in Ontario will be eliminated under the new arrangements and this in particular is likely to cause a great deal of heated debate. It is somewhat premature to forecast alterations in the Federal Constituency of Macleod. If a 30 per cent tolerance were allowed for rural constituencies, there would be no need for any change. However, the Liberal Party has its greatest strength in cities and they favor rural ridings and increasing the city ridings. Such a move would also help the N.D.P. party since they draw their support largely from cities and industrial areas and therefore they are expected to support the Liberal position in the House of Commons to reduce the number of rural seats.

Humidity Too High
If Windows "Steam Up"

Windows that get "misty" in cool weather are annoying but they can also be helpful danger signals, warning you that the humidity in your home is too high.

A humidity of 40 to 50 per cent is considered ideal for comfort and health.

In older houses it is often difficult to keep this much moisture in the air. In modern, well insulated homes, however, the balance can swing the other way and excessive humidity becomes a problem which causes untold damage.

The gallons of water which we add to the air every day in cooking, bathing and washing clothes, have no way to escape to the drier air outside.

Because glass is a natural vapor barrier, moisture collects on the window panes when the inside air becomes saturated. Since the air next to single glazed windows is considerably cooler, it has even less moisture carrying capacity than the rest of the air in the room.

Seeking the drier air outside, the water vapor may pass right into the walls and collect under the exterior paint, causing it to blister or it may condense on the wall studs and siding, eventually causing decay.

Search and Rescue Crews
Find Sarah a Useful Gal

VANCOUVER — RCAF search and rescue crews invariably take SARAH along for the ride when they set out on a search for a missing aircraft.

SARAH is no ordinary flesh and blood female—she is made of plastic, glass and metal, and her name actually stands for Search and Rescue and Homing transmitter-receiver. She has long since proved herself to be an invaluable member of the crew in the locating of missing aircraft.

Air Force officials strongly recommend SARAH as standard equipment for all civil aircraft, especially those flying in the more remote regions.

The transmitting half of SARAH is carried with the survival equipment on all RCAF aircraft. It is about the size of the transistor radio carried by teen-agers and enables the pilot of a downed plane to transmit radio pulses for 25 hours. These pulses fan out in a cone which forms a beacon approximately 140 miles across at a height of 10,000 feet.

On RCAF search planes the radio officer operates the receiver half of SARAH which picks up the pulses transmitted by the downed airmen. These signals enable the search aircraft to "home in" on the lost plane from as far away as 70 miles. The distance varies with the terrain.

The radio pulses sent out by the downed airmen are picked up as blips of light on the small TV-like screen on the SARAH receiver. The search plane is then able to lock-on to the signals. The moment it passes over the downed plane the blips of light cease, indicating

If your home is equipped with properly fitted storm sash or glazed with insulating glass and the windows collect excessive moisture, the problem is even more acute since double-glazing and windows with snug storm sash readily condensation far less readily than do single windows.

To keep humidity at reasonable levels, have clothes dryers vented outside as they are a prime source of moisture. Open a window for a few minutes after a shower or a bath and do the same thing with a door if downstairs windows start to steam up. The resultant heat loss will be small and excessive humidity will quickly pass outside. When cooking or washing dishes, open the kitchen window a bit at the top and do the same with a basement window if you hang washing there to dry.

If, after taking these simple precautions, the problem of condensation still persists, it's wise to enlist the help of a competent carpenter and have him check roof, flashings and gutters for leaks. Further relief can often be had by installing a vent fan in the kitchen and bathroom and insulating any crawl space under the house with vapor-backed insulation material.

Oral Poliovirus
Vaccine (Sabin)
Program For 1964

Commencing early in January, 1964, the Oral Poliovirus Vaccine (Sabin) will be administered to all residents in the province of Alberta through the various Health Units and City Health Departments.

The vaccine produced by the Connaught Laboratories, Toronto, Ont., looks like raspberry juice and is almost tasteless. It will be given on a lump of sugar and people that do not like sugar can take it with water.

Only persons who have received three shots of Salk Polio vaccine and children who have had four shots of Quad Vaccine (combined antigen) will be eligible for the Oral Vaccine at this time.

Sabin Vaccine does not replace Salk at present — but the two vaccines complement each other. Salk Vaccine alone gives about 80 to 85 per cent protection, but Salk vaccine plus Sabin vaccine gives almost 100 per cent protection.

The level of immunity achieved by Sabin vaccine is greater and lasts longer (probably for life) than the level of immunity produced by Salk vaccine alone. Sabin vaccine is safe and side effects are negligible.

Persons who received only one dose of the Sabin vaccine in 1963 are urged to take the second dose of the vaccine at this time.

The vaccine will be available to all persons within the Chinook Health Unit area during the regular Baby and Pre-School Clinics.

All persons are urged to take advantage of this Oral Polio Vaccine. Sabin vaccine provides a unique opportunity to wipe out Polio. Our objective is to have practically 100 per cent of the school population and about 80 per cent of the adult population immunized. All persons are urged to take advantage of this Oral Polio Vaccine.

IN ORDER TO PUBLISH

Reports of meetings of various organizations, it would help if a press correspondent was appointed by each one to send in the news. It is impossible for a reporter to attend all the meetings. Therefore co-operation would be appreciated, and at the same time publicity would be assured for the meetings.

Lethbridge Exhibition July 20 to 25

The Board of Directors of the Lethbridge & District Exhibition have confirmed that the dates of the 1964 Summer Fair will be July 20 to July 25.

This is an increase of days and means the Fair will run a full week instead of four days as in previous years. It had been announced earlier that the Summer Fair would be five days. However it was felt that greater emphasis could be given to exhibits and a wider variety to the Night Show with six days.

The "No Pass" policy with a one price gate and free grandstand will still be in effect. It means that the public will get three night grandstand shows — Monday to Wednesday, and three nights of Rodeo — Thursday to Saturday with an extra performance of rodeo on Wednesday afternoon. The Board feels that this is the largest entertainment package offered on a free grandstand at any fair in Canada.

The Grandstand Show for 1964 will be from the Tom Drake Agency of Kansas City, Mo., and the Midway will be the Art B. Thomas Shows of Lennox, S. D.

The Livestock committee is also considering extending the show to include market classes for steers as recommended by both the Provincial and Federal Departments of Agriculture. At present the committee is studying the possibility of two complete shows in the week.

Older Worker Incentive Program Extended

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen, Minister of Labor, announced yesterday that the hiring period for the Federal government's Older Worker Employment Incentive Program was being extended by two months from January 31 to March 31, 1964.

Under the incentive program — which became effective November 1 — the Department of Labor is offering to pay to employers up to $75 a month for 12 months for each new employee 45 and over, who has been unemployed for six months or more while they hire in a new job or one not vacated since September 1, 1963.

In making the announcement Mr. MacEachen said that the extension will give employers more time to consider more fully their manpower requirements and to make any adjustments in their hiring practices in order to take advantage of the program and at the same time benefit deserving older workers and their communities.

The Minister said the program involves a new concept in engaging workers. It is an imaginative experiment to try to overcome reluctance against hiring older workers, and to solve employment problems for those older workers who have experienced lengthy periods of unemployment. As such, it had received the full endorsement of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, the Canadian Labour Congress, the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities, and other National organizations. The Provincial Departments of Welfare are also giving their full support and co-operation.

Much interest in the program has also been shown by individual employers in all parts of Canada. During the first month of the hiring period some 325 employers had filed applications for older workers with the National Employment Service. The numbers will no doubt increase as the program continues.

The program is specifically timed to encourage increased employment during the traditional off-season winter lull. This timing has tended to slow down employer response since many of the job openings at this time of year are filled by re-hiring workers temporarily laid off. The extension of the hiring period will allow more time for new jobs to develop.

The Minister also announced that in future eligible older workers will not be required to exhaust their regular unemployment insurance benefits before qualifying under the program.

As long as they have been unemployed for six of the previous nine months they will be able to participate under the program. The removal of the exhaustion of benefits requirement will increase the response substantially on the part of workers and will also, the Minister stated, likely make the program more attractive to employers.

Mr. MacEachen invited employers to get in touch with National Employment offices as soon as possible to discuss how they can best take advantage of this program.

Thirteen cases of Red Cross supplies left Canada at the week-end for Vancouver enroute to Burma and Korea.

The shipment, which contained 158 warm quilts bound for Korea and 3862 items of children's light-weight clothing for youngsters in Burma, represents hundreds of hours of voluntary effort by members of the Red Cross Women's Work committee throughout the province, who produce and pack the overseas supplies.

With exception of possible disaster aid, the current shipment is the final one to leave Provincial Red Cross headquarters this year and makes a total of 82 cases of new clothing and bedding shipped overseas in 1963.
